

CARE  HELP

Clean water is essential to health and a good education.

In the Central Highlands of Vietnam, in addition to safe wells, Care to Help has built classrooms, funds teaching staff at two schools, and helps villagers gain access to health care from visiting health professionals.

The key to the success of all these programs remains access to clean water.

Thi Dua Elementary School

With your support, Care to Help (CTH) has completed over 20 safe water well projects in Vietnam. We are now looking to raise funds to build a new water project. This new project would be built at an elementary school (Thi Dua School) that has an enrollment of about 350 students, but no clean water. They do have a nonpotable water source, but any drinking or cooking water must be trucked in.

Our project manager in Vietnam, Hung Viet Nguyen, has evaluated this project and secured all necessary permitting. We will begin drilling a new well as soon as we have the funds available. Could you help CTH to fund this new project, as well as the ongoing maintenance needs of the other wells and schools already completed?

What we have accomplished with your help so far, has been incredible to watch, we see much improved levels of health and education every time we visit. In the villages where we have been able to help with water projects or schools, the improvements in health and education have been astounding.

CTH is a fully tax deductible 501(c)(3) non-profit organization

When we return to Vietnam this November, it will mark 10 years since we drilled that first well to help people in dire need of clean water. CTH has worked better than we ever expected.
